Paige left her small town in Indiana and headed to California to get her engineering degree at Stanford. She faced the challenge of no longer being the popular kid in her small town high school and a roommate that loved to make her feel uncomfortable. Interracial dating was unheard of in her backward town, so when she met Claire, a beautiful black student at her new school, the intrigue was too intense to deny. Her mother always said curiosity killed the cat. Could it be true? Yes, they were different, very different, but if opposites attract, how was she supposed to fight that attraction? A story of an interracial lesbian romance that unfolds between college students. As the young girls just begin their journey of life, they learn an important life lesson; not everything that feels good, is good for you.
