Hoyt v. Sprague, 13 Otto, 629. As they claim the profits, they must allow Folkes credit for all the expenses incurred in conducting the business--including Hilliards contract--that bring necessary for the preservation of the estate, and a thing that enhanced the value of the common property, and if not executed may leave a possible burden on Folkes beyond his share; in other words, by claiming the profits they assent to Folkes contracts and manner of transacting the business, and submit to terms of perfect equality between Folkes and Fizers estate. In brief, they ask Folkes to divide with them the profits he made. Their claim is derivative through him. And he can get nothing until Hilliard is satisfied. The contract with Hilliard is a part of the expenses; and if Folkes is driven to satisfy Hilliard free of cost to the complainants, it may turn out he will get nothing, when the entire profits are due to his time, labor, skill and money. We repeat, we must find the clear, net profits to Folkes, and let complainants iu for half. They cannot stand above or on better ground than Folkes. Maysonw.
