Among his followers is James MacLonan, a young, idealistic believer in the Jacobite cause. James flees to France, fearing he will never be allowed to return to Scotland. Edinburgh, 1750 Four years have passed. James is offered a pardon, but the terms require him to marry a woman with ties to the English king. If he does not he will be exiled forever. Theadora Tilton is the daughter of the English general. She is deeply attracted to James MacLonan, but he is a Jacobite rebel and she has always been loyal to King George.
