

Refuting the Testimony of Biomechanical Experts: A Guide for Personal Injury Attorneys

Biomechanical experts who testify on behalf of the defendants in personal injury cases resulting from automobile collisions repeatedly cite the same 20-30 clinical studies in support of their findings. In this guide, we examine these studies and many others as to the limited circumstances under which these studies would be both admissible and relevant. We introduce two seldom-cited articles in the plaintiffs interests which are put forward as the gold standard by the experts themselves. by the author of Applying Statistics in the Courtroom.
