

Pushin Up Daisies (Black Swan Historical Romance)

Catherine OShea is the oldest and most responsible of the three OShea sisters. She has just buried her mother, one of the last victims of the flu epidemic of 1918. Her father had been one of the first to succumb to the flu and her fiance was killed in the war. And now there is a detective living at her hotel, the Black Swan, looking into the disappearance of her abusive brother-in-law. He is entirely the wrong person and it is absolutely the wrong time for her to be giving Detective Massey a second look, much less a third and fourth. Shell simply have to control the sparks that fly every time they are together. Quincy Massey just wants to get the little job of finding Ralph Contiello done and go back home to Little Rock, Arkansas. The small town of Huttig is friendly enough but it sure isnt his type of town. And Catherine OShea with her smart remarks and red hair is getting under his skin entirely too much. Quincys unstoppable quest for the truth and Catherines unflappable determination to keep it hidden immediately sets the two of them at odds. In order to look towards a future with its offer of unconditional love theyll first have to bury the past.
