

The Craftsman (The Conquerors Book 3)

Raedwulf, son of a Saxon noble, is finally released from William the Conquerors prison. Unfortunately, this amnesty is conditional on an arranged marriage, but he just wants to be left in peace with his carpentry. The last thing he needs is a woman forced to bed him out of duty. Emma is newly widowed. Believed barren, she never expected to marry again and planned to enter a convent. Instead, a fateful mistake sends her to this quiet, brooding man, who spends long hours alone with his woodwork. She's stunned to learn that Wulf is a virgin, especially when she sees the magnificent craftsman's tool in his breeches. Before they are parted by the truth, can she teach Wulf to use that splendid, God-given implement with the same skill as he wields those in his workshop? Or will Emma learn some lessons of her own at the hands of The Craftsman? Be Warned: m/f/m, m/m/f, m/m scenes
